PASTIME SHOWING CLEVER
WILLIAM RUSSELL
FEATURE TODAY

The superb feature, "The Man Who Would Not Die," with William Russell and beautiful Charlotte Burton, will have its final screening at the Pastime today. This is a clever story and one that holds the interest throughout. A good comedy fills out the program.

"Where Love Leads," William Fox Feature Thursday-Friday.
Orni Hawley has the difficult part of acting young sweetheart, aging mother and then returning to act young sweetheart again in the new William Fox photodrama "Where Love Leads." But she stands the test well.

As Marion Barstow she is influenced by her parents to marry Sir Rankin Chatsworth (Charles Craig) an English earl, although she was in love with a younger man.

Seventeen years later Marion has been neglected by Sir Rankin, who tired of her soon after the honeymoon. She now has as her only consolation, her two daughters, Kathleen (Eileen Hume) and Rose (Pauline Curley). Sir Rankin brings a household of disreputable guests who drink and carouse all night. Marion realizes that her daughters must not be brought up in such an atmosphere and has as one with Sir Rankin, but he refuses to mend his ways.

Marion's mother has written, begging her to send the girls to America for a visit. She then takes the girls to the steamer, and while bidding good-bye to them, is approached by Camille Dore (Dorothy Rogers), known as the Gold Queen in the Tenderloin. Camille is traveling under an assumed name, and as she is very respectable and aristocratic looking.

Marion does not hesitate to entrust the girls to her care. Camille sees that she has made a find in the two girls and cables a confederate to prevent the grandparents from meeting the steamer on the arrival.

The girls are rescued by Richard Warren, a newspaperman who had been Marion's sweetheart before she was forced to marry the English nobleman. The former lovers are united in the strangest sort of way which ends the picture with a happy laugh. Miss Hawley makes as good a mother as a sweetheart schoolgirl, which in the same production is a difficult test.

Coming to Alta Thursday, One Night Only.

"Thelma," a dramatization of Marie Corelli's Famous Story of The Land of the Midnight Sun.

"Thelma" is a wholesome novel and has been read by all tongues and can be found among the books in the libraries of those who love good, clean fiction. If you have read the book you will be surprised to find how well the story has been written into dramatic form and you will see the characters apparently step from the book to act out the story, surrounded by the atmosphere of Norway and England.

You will see the Echo Cave, the Midnight Sun, the Rainbow of Death, and the burning ship in which the old Viking makes his last sea voyage.

This attraction is from Chicago and the characters of the story have been placed into the hands of an exceptionally strong company of artists who portray their respective parts true to life as the story goes and Richardson & Talbert, who are bringing "Thelma" to the Alta have mounted the play with beautiful scenic and electrical effects and guarantee it to be one of the best shows that will visit the local play house this season.

This is not a moving picture show, but real live, walking, talking, experienced actors.

Large crowds are greeting this play everywhere and in order that you secure good seats it is advisable that you come early.

AT THE TEMPLE
"THE THOROUGHBRED"
HAS THRILLING
RACETRACK SCENES

In Fact, New Triangle Play is a Racing Story With Fine Show of Horseflesh.

The Sport of Kings, with all its attendant excitement, is said to be thrillingly portrayed in a number of scenes in "The Thoroughbred," the Triangle play by C. Gardner Sullivan, in which Thomas H. Ince presents Frank Keenan as star. The story concerns the efforts of a Puritanic young minister to effect the abolition of horse-racing in one of the southern states, his success and his ultimate conviction, inspired by a realization of the fact that his activities have caused poverty in the home of Major Anslee, whose daughter he loves. Many of the scenes therefore, are those of the race track.

To film this portion of the subject, Reinhold Barker, who directed it, took his entire company to Tijuana, Mexico, where horse racing at the time was enjoying a tremendous popularity. Through the influence of friends, in control of the track, he was given permission to use all parts of the track, paddock, stables and grandstands for his purpose. Thrilling days were spent at the track and Barker returned with several thousand feet of exposed film depicting the horse-racing at the height of its vogue.
